California ISO Offers OASIS Tutorial for Media

(Folsom, CA) The California Independent System Operator Corporation (California ISO) successfully launched a new market system at midnight on Tuesday, March 31. The new system is operating well within expected prices and parameters.

The California ISO introduced a new Open Access Same-time Information System (OASIS) website when it launched the new markets. The new OASIS provides far more transparent information about market performance and pricing information, with comprehensive data charts and other useful resource material.

The California ISO is offering tutorial that to help media navigate and fully utilize the new OASIS site. Please note, the California ISO has already offered extensive training to market participants and others in the energy industry. This tutorial is for news media and trade publications only.
