35.3 Finality of Prices Subject to the Price Correction Process.

All prices shall be considered provisional until the CAISO has completed the price correction process regarding them. All prices for each Trading Day shall be considered final for purposes of this Section 35 once the price correction process for that Trading Day has ended. There shall be no price corrections after the price correction process has expired except as otherwise directed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction. In addition, for intervals in which the CAISO experiences a problem with the processing or publication of prices, there shall be no changes to prices after the number of days following the applicable Trading Day as specified the applicable Business Practice Manual except as otherwise directed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction. ~~except that the CAISO may adjust, recalculate, or otherwise correct such prices after the conclusion of the price correction process to the extent authorized by the provisions of the CAISO Tariff other than this Section 35.~~
