Subject: Comments on Conceptual Models for Governing the Energy Imbalance Market

Members of the EIM Transitional Committee:

The Wyoming Public Service Commission has no substantive comments at this time. We do, however, have a procedural suggestion.

We believe the discussion of the respective benefits and trade-offs associated with the three conceptual models is an important component of the process of developing a long-term EIM governance structure proposal.

Stakeholder comments are likely to illuminate potential advantages of one model over another and of positions along the continuum that are difficult to anticipate before having an opportunity to consider others' views.

We request that the Transitional Committee make all filed comments available to stakeholders and revise the schedule to allow reply comments within a reasonable time. This would provide stakeholders an opportunity to benefit from the insights of others and would provide the Transitional Committee a more complete basis for developing the straw proposal.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Christopher Petrie
